It is plain also, either that Blaine is not the object of enmity at the White House or else that he is strong enough to bid defiance to Grant.

Minister to Austria.

Speaking of Beale's appointment the World says: With most of his appointments Grant has pleased himself with profound disregard of whether he pleases anyone else, or whether he strengthened himself politically. Beale has no sort of public claims to be put in such a post as that of Minister to Austria, neither has he ever shown or had a chance of showing any special fitness for it. He is a member of the curious group of Pacific slope statesmen, of which Senator Jones, of Nevada, is the most conspicuous figure.

Tilden's Nomination.

The World this morning has a long account of interviews with Chief Justice Church, Erastus Corning and others, with regard to the propriety of Tilden's nomination at St Louis. The burden of this is that New York cannot claim the nomination after having it three times in succession. Bayard is highly praised as being an acceptable candidate, while Tilden is shown not to have the support of the entire Democratic party of New York State and could not carry the State, having alienated the best part of the Democracy.

The Sun's Opinion of the Testimony against Blaine.

The Sun thinks the testimony yesterday shows Blaine as caught at last.

150 Miles against Time.

NEW YORK, May 25.—At noon to-day Francisco Caperton will commence to ride 150 miles in seven hours, over the Fleetwood track. The track being at his disposal, he has taken 25 out of 30 mustangs, which were recently brought from California. The track is in good condition. Yesterday afternoon the animals were exercised by the rider, who said he felt confident of winning the race. Late last evening Caperton was brought from the Park to the city. He wore goggles, which were purchased for him to protect his eyes against the sun, this precaution being deemed necessary from the fact that in the last race Parker, the rider, was compelled to stop on account of blindness.

FLEETWOOD PARK, May 25.—Seventy seven and a half miles in the mustang race were made in three hours, twenty-five minutes and forty-five seconds, being fifteen seconds behind the required average time.

Successful Contractor.

The Reading, Pennsylvania, Times announces that Capt. Reed, of Canada, has the contract for building the Lick monument at Fredericksburg, Lebanon county, Pennsylvania, for which James Lick, of California, has reserved and appropriated $20 000. The monument is to be composed of Scotch granite and will be ornamented with nine portraits which will be life size, and will embrace continental soldiers religion, etc. The top is to be capped by the goddess of liberty, holding in her hand an American flag. The work will be immediately commenced on the monument and it is expected that in a year it will be completed. The work will be partly performed in Scotland and the rest in Canada.

Cadets Required to Resign.

ANNAPOLIS, May 25.—Nine cadets, midshipmen of the second and third classes, were required to resign yesterday and suffer ejection from the academy, for a theft committed some days since. Samples of gentlemen's furnishing goods were deposited in the room of one of the first class men by a Baltimore drummer and during his absence they were taken.

NEW YORK, May 25.—Francis Carpenter began at noon to-day, on the Fleetwood course, to ride 25 mustangs 150 miles, within 7 hours, and 50 miles were completed in two hours and 13¼ minutes from the start.

Gold and Stocks.

NEW YORK, May 25.—Gold closed at 12⅝@⅜; money, 2½@3; governments dull but strong; stocks dull, irregular; W. U. 64⅞, Quicksilver 14⅝, Pacific Mail, 25⅝, Mariposa, 5⅝; Wells Fargo, 83¾, New York Central, 110⅝, Erie, 13¾, Panama, 133; C. P. stock, 58; bonds, 104⅝; C. P. bonds, 108⅝.

Reported Outbreak of Convicts.

A telegram was received from the penitentiary at 1:45 P. M. stating that there was a meeting at Blackwell's Island among the penitentiary convicts, and that they had mastered the keepers and taken possession of the boats, by means of which they are escaping to Dey and Second streets. The police reserves were at once sent over, but up to this hour no definite report has been obtained.

WASHINGTON CITY.

Blaine Jubilant.

Majority of Delegates Claimed for Blaine.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Blaine's friends now claim a majority of the Cincinnati Convention already assured for his nomination. Some claim he has five hundred.

An Evening Washington special says Blaine is jubilant over the Western news, and his friends declare Nebraska, Kansas and Minnesota will follow the lead of Illinois for him. Every Republican state west of Indiana is now claimed for Blaine. Grant sticks to Conkling, but only a combination with Morton can save him.

Orth and the Venezuela Matter.

The World's Washington special says: After a careful examination of law and facts, prominent lawyers have been convinced that Orth violated the law in acting as attorney in the Venezuela matter, and is liable to the penalty.

Jurisdiction, or Not?

To-day's calculation in the matter of Senate jurisdiction in the impeachment trial, shows 30 for, 22 against, and nine doubtful. The two new Senators will not vote, not having heard all the arguments. The arguments have been purely legal and not partisan.

Who will Dun the British now?

NEW YORK, May 25.—Todd, the famous English tailor, died about two weeks ago. He is said to have been born at Worcester, Mass., and to have been practically the banker of the Prince of Wales.

A Midnight Rumor.

NEW YORK, May 25.—The Herald's Washington special mentions a midnight rumor of the resignation of Robeson, also that the President declined to accept.

Beale.

Beale was in early life an officer in the navy and took part in the series of actions which resulted in the capture of California, and for his brilliant services was made bearer of the dispatches which first announced that event to Polk, and he brought over the earliest specimen of gold from California to the [illegible]. He was afterwards employed with Kit Carson and others in public surveys, and crossed the continent several times to lay out the 35th parallel wagon road. He was Superintendent of Indian Affairs in California and New Mexico, where he won his first success in managing Indians. He was commissioned brigadier general of California to complete the Indian war, and was detailed by the Treasury Department to report upon the efficiency of camels upon the Western plains. In 1861 he was appointed Surveyor General of California and Nevada, and sent his resignation to Lincoln with a request for active service in the army, but his resignation was not accepted. Beale is a scholarly and accomplished man, speaks several languages, and is a man of large wealth, though he has not in recent years been in public service. While a resident of Pennsylvania he took part in the discussion of public questions, and was among the first in that State to urge in a public speech, that votes should be given to the colored people. More recently he lived in Washington, in whose society his family are general favorites. He comes of an old naval family, being grandson to Commodore Truxton, and he was himself educated at the Naval Academy, where he graduated in 1842.

Bristow's Friends Indignant.

The Sun's Washington special says Bristow's friends are indignant at the recent Cabinet change which was made without his knowledge, and it is believed to be against his interest. They say immediate resignation is the only course left open to him.

Hartranft.

Hartranft has no idea of giving up his aspirations for the Presidency. He thinks Cameron cannot deliver the goods, and believes he is the great unknown.

Blaine's Opinion of the Testimony.

The Times' Washington special says Blaine charges the testimony as the result of a conspiracy against him by Arkansas politicians on account of his political action of last year. Blaine denies the right of the committee to enter upon this branch of inquiry, and he seems not to realize that his interests demand from whatever source the fullest investigation of hearsay charges against him.

Report Stolen and Prematurely Published.

The report of the committee on District of Columbia matters was stolen and prematurely published. It will be greatly modified. There has been nothing at all in the investigation to excite public interest and its contents show that Buckner's proposition to prosecute commissioners wholly unreasonable. It has not the support of any portion of the committee.

House of Representatives.

To day's session of the House was devoted to discussing the right of Frank Morey of the Fifth Louisiana District to his seat. Morey was returned by over 500 votes, but the committee on elections have hied this majority away and figured up a decided balance in favor of William B Spencer and reported in his favor by a party vote. No vote will be reached to day. Of course Morey will be rejected in accordance with the Democratic programme.

Report on Schenck.

The report in the Schenck matter is to be made to day and will contain a censure of the executive department and Fish will not be blamed for the action or want of action on his part. The fact that the committee is unanimous in all its report gives great satisfaction to the Republican members of the committee. Schenck telegraphed that he had mailed a reply to Cheesbrough's letter and requested it to be attached to the report made to day.

Belknap Preparing to Leave.

The Tribune's Washington special says: Belknap is packing his household goods preparatory to leaving town. His young child is quite sick and his physician has recommended an immediate change of climate. Belknap will return if the trial should go on.

Caucus on Fitzhugh.

A caucus of Democratic members will be held to-morrow to agree on Fitzhugh's successor.

Blaine's Bond Business.

The committee on Blaine's bond business met to-day. Hurd offered a resolution to the effect that the resolution of the full committee authorizing the sub-committee to conduct the investigation, did not authorize any investigation of the question whether a corrupt use of the bonds was made to procure legislation unless it related to the Little Rock and Arkansas bonds which came in possession of the Pacific Co. Agreed to.

HEWITT'S SPEECH ON THE EMMA MINE CASE.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Hewitt said the materials furnished by the evidence served to show how the ambassador of the U. S. so far forgot his high station that he not only consented to become director in a company proposing to sell its shares in the country to which he was accorded, but allowed his name and the official title of American minister to go forth in the prospectus as a voucher of its exceptional character; how, by subscribing publicly for £10,000 of stock, apparently upon the same terms as other subscribers, but in reality upon private arrangements previously made in the venture in which he put no money at risk, and was absolutely guaranteed against loss, the envoy of the great Republic placed himself in the attitude of a puffer at an auction sale; how he speculated in the stock of the corporation, which he had thus helped to create and direct; how he seemed to be incapable of drawing the distinction between investment and speculation; how he associated one of his secretaries of the legation in these speculative operations, and availed himself of the services of the other to watch the fluctuations of the stock market and practically to act as his broker for the sale of shares; how he records his opinion that it is a proper thing, not merely for an ordinary man, but for an American Minister, to sell stock "short," that is, sell what he does not own, and expresses his regret that he did not do so and indemnify himself against loss by transferring it to some one else not in possession of the information which he had received through private sources; how he so confuses his accounts of the profits which he actually did realize or might have realized, out of his original transaction with Park, with the losses which he made in speculations in the stock, having no relation to this transaction with Park; how he accepts credit upon the note which he had given to Park, the nature and origin of which he had no knowledge whatever of, except that they arose out of transactions wherein he was at no risk; how he declines further credits of the same character because he thinks that the limit of favors has been reached; how he arrived at that conclusion only after the public press had been filled with hostile criticism; how his memory as to the mode of payment of the second allotment of shares leads him to London to swear that Park did not provide the means for the payment thereof, and how, before the committee, when it had been clearly shown that Park did provide these means, he retracts the statement made in London; how, on final settlement with Park, he transfers to him, in payment of his indebtedness, the stocks upon which he continues to draw dividends; how, on leaving he is forced to plead his diplomatic privilege as his defense against the service of a writ in a civil action growing out of his unfortunate connection with this disastrous undertaking; how, finally, he retracts his inability to comprehend the false and unfortunate position in which he is placed before the public by a series of ill advised transaction in which it is charitable to regard his memory as at fault and to look upon him as the victim of designing and unscrupulous men, leading and persuading him to an equal ruin of reputation and purse.

These materials serve to show how William M Stewart, Senator of the United States, while acting as counsel for a client who had placed his interest unreservedly in his hands with whom he had arranged for a contingent fee, which should have bound him all the more zealously to guard the interest of his client, became the purchaser of that interest at a time and under circumstances when he could have calculated its value with almost mathematical certainty, in a bargain which gave to the client $150 000, which was practically the contingent fee and to the counsel the larger sum, ($275,000) which should have gone to the client; how this magnificent sum, which was paid by Clark to Stewart, was not in pursuance of any written agreement, but in accordance with an unwritten understanding, apparently based upon a sentiment of honor which has been formulated in the English language, now the legal redress, wisely secured by law to the clients under such circumstances, was cut off by a further payment at a later date, which Stewart stigmatizes as blackmail and a release secured, which as a summary of the whole transaction is a legal curiosity and model form for lawyers who desire to secure protection from their clients. It is well for them to preserve it. This was secured immunity from the claims of his client; but not from the impartial judgment of the legal profession and of the world. Finally these materials serve to show how Park, a member of the American bar and president of the National Bank of North Bedington, Vt., and well known to the American public for his connection with Mariposa county, whose disastrous failure some years ago will not soon be forgotten by those who suffered, the great author of this mischief, with skill which has never been surpassed, going to London an entire stranger, but having carefully prepared the way by a large shipment of ore, and glowing accounts of the production of the mine, within one short month secured the services of A. Grant, the greatest manipulator of speculative shares of modern times for a fee which may be small for him, but which in this country of primitive notions would be deemed magnificent; how he provided in the contract for sustaining the market pending the allotment by purchasers of shares at fictitious prices so as to gather in the prices of bona fide investers, a process said to be usual in England that which here would be regarded as little short of robbery; how widows and clergymen and half pay officers and others, living upon annuities were thus induced to invest their scanty capital in the hope of securing permanent dividends at high rates of interest from an enterprise said to be an exception by the American minister; how he ingratiated himself into the confidence of the American representative at the Court of St. James, so that within two short weeks he felt an irresistible desire to shower benefits upon him, and to relieve him from the embarrassments arising from large expenditures out of his narrow official income; how he imposed the minister with that charming confidence which accepts favors without suspicion that they are to be requited; how he issues a prospectus containing a statement calculated to persuade the most wary, but which turns out to be in mournful contrast with the actual issue of the enterprise; how, when he was allowed to lose, by the resignation of the American minister, the mainstay upon which he relied for the sale of the remaining half of the shares of the company, which had been tied up for a time, he procures a letter, which was declared to be in effect better than to have the minister remain as director, wherein he reindorses the great value of the property; how everybody who could assist or injure the successful perpetuation of the sale was conciliated by a "pull," as the Senator from Nevada sarcastically describes them, upon the funds collected from a confiding public; so about a million dollars were expended in preliminary expenses which the great American banking house of Jay Cooke & Co got a pull of a hundred and twenty five thousand dollars; how when doubts began to arise as to the continued productiveness of the property before the reserve shares had been sold, they procured the services of the vice chairman of the company, (Bridges Williams) to make a personal examination of the mine by the payment of £10 000 and a call for, or a right to take 2,000 shares of stock at a price at which the call could only be profitable to the examiner as the result of a favorable report; how this favorable report was made and the reserved shares were sold at a premium of three pounds per share; how, when the public supposed these were still tied up for months to come, they were all sold within two weeks of the receipt by telegraph of the report; how even the astute and accomplished Albert Grant was induced by a process which no man can find out to abate his claims for one half the profits and accept one pound per share in lieu thereof; how he was induced to give up his just claim for £2,000 compensation on the stock which had been alloted to Gen. Schenck, and how the same was credited on Schenck's note to Park, falling like manna from heaven; how Park bought and sold the shares through Clark and by previous courses, coming out at the end with a profit; and how when shares were selling over £20 a piece in London he bought out his partners in New York at less than half that price; how at the shareholders meetings in London, which he attended, everything was made lovely for everybody so that no one appears to have any legal grounds against him for indemnity although dividends ceased at thirteen months and the shares are now selling at 25 shillings apiece; how the whole business is involved in litigation on both sides of the Atlantic, so that Park declines for fear of putting his accounts upon record to testify as to the amount of profit which he realized from the sale of shares; how libel suits are pending against the newspapers which have endeavored to express an unfavorable opinion with regard to the operation which has raised greater scandal in the business and diplomatic world than any transaction of modern times, to the spectre of which the author of its being, Trenor W. Park, triumphantly exclaims, "Shake not thy gory locks at me! thou canst not say I did it!" All this and more of the same unsavory sort can be learned from the perusal of the evidence herewith submitted.

A Walla Walla man who has lately been to Dayton W. T. reports crop prospects in that section as unsurpassed. He spent a day also in visiting the new landing at the mouth of the Tukanon. The road between that point and Dayton he describes as being one of the finest in the country, with an almost perfect natural grade. The landing at the mouth of the Tukanon is good and is being well patronized by shippers. The position of Dayton in the matter of shipping facilities, is better than that of Walla Walla.

Not Suicide but Defalcation.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 25.—In the case of Judge Ferris, of Oakland, recently reported as having committed suicide by jumping from the Sacramento steamer, it is now rumored among his acquaintances in Oakland, that very possibly he has not committed suicide, but has left the State, and that the ostensible suicide was simply to disarm suspicion. It is reported that before leaving Oakland the Judge drew $1,700 from one bank in Oakland, and other sums from the various banks there and in this city also. It is stated he was owing large sums which he could not meet. There are rumors that he has been seen in Salt Lake City and other places, but little importance has been attached to them.

Bay View Distillers Sued.

U. S District Attorney Coghlan will to day bring suit in the U. S. district court against the Bay View distillery proprietors, asking that the establishment be condemned and forfeited to the government for violation of the revenue laws.

Smallpox in San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 25.—Despite the efforts of health officer Mears to prevent the spread of small pox, the contagion is increasing. A special meeting of the board of health to devise means to check the spread has been called for to morrow. Since the first case reported, shortly after the arrival of the Colorado, 12 others have made their appearance in different parts of the city. Two cases were reported yesterday as having occurred on Brannan street, between Sixth and Seventh. The houses have been quarantined. To-day another case was reported in the Portsmouth House, on Clay street, occupied as a Chinese lodging house. Last night a Swede residing near Washington and Leavenworth streets died of the disease, and the body was removed early this morning by Dr. Meares' assistants. The crowded condition of the county jail excites some alarm. The sheriff, it is said, has asked the board of supervisors to construct additional cells in the old hospital building at North Beach in order to relieve the jail.

Dr. Mearce has a fresh supply of vaccine matter, and citizens are generally requested to be vaccinated.

Gold Claim Located.

This morning Payot, Upham & Co., recorded a location of 1,500 on the alleged gold-bearing ledge recently discovered by Victor Bessayer on Bernal Heights. The claim of Payot, Upham & Co., adjoins the northwestern boundary of the discovery claim.

Smallpox Victim.

Only one death, thus far, has occurred from smallpox in the city, that of Keyser, the well known butcher of California market. No new cases are reported, and of seven previously brought to the attention of the authorities, all are progressing favorably, with the exception above stated.

BY ATLANTIC CABLE.

The Porte will Accept the Berlin Propositions.

BERLIN, May 24.—Trustworthy intelligence received from Constantinople states that the Porte will not reject the proposals of the Berlin conference, but will ask for considerable modification.

The Turkish Troubles.

LONDON, May 25.—A dispatch from Pesth says a Turkish ambassador arrived here to confer with Count Andrassy. The Russian, German and Austrian ambassadors, and the president of Montenegro are expected here.

A Berlin correspondent telegraphs that there are symptoms showing a turn for worse in Eastern affairs. The Servian representative at Constantinople formally complained of Turkey's hostile acts. Twenty-seven Russian and a number of Swiss arrived at Belgrade to take part in the active preparation for the campaign. It is foreseen that the present attempt at pacification will be as useless as that made by Baron Rudich. It is necessary to decide shortly whether this fresh failure is to be followed by further concession to the insurgents, or whether an opposite policy is advisable. Preparations of Servia assisted by Russian officers, seem intended to influence the decision of Austria.

LONDON, May 25.—A Belgrade telegram says it is reported that 30,000 Bulgarians rose in insurrection yesterday, from Blidno to Dibwan, on the occasion of a feast of their patron saint, Cyril. Twelve thousand Turks are sent against them from Ulass and Widda.

There are a few semi-respectable young men in this place, who could not properly be called gentlemen and who will have the pleasure of seeing their names in print if they are not more careful in the future in regard to certain practices of which they are guilty. It appears that they omit no opportunity to furnish some young ladies with flasks containing a liquid somewhat stronger that water, and which, on one occasion was more than all the parties could conveniently carry. A word to the wise is sufficient.

Last Monday, as our genial and obliging boss truckman Phil Miller, was hauling a load of slab wood over the bridge which spans the waste-race of the mill pond, it suddenly gave way and precipitated the truck and driver to the bottom of the race, some seven or eight feet. The truck stood straight up on end, while Phil slid off and spun around up the bank to loosen his team, which were on a solid span and were still holding the truck. Damage, a broken bridge, a spilt load of wood and a badly frightened teamster.

The reported death of Mrs. Copperman, at Sitka brings to mind a tragic occurrence connected with her history. She came to Victoria in 1858, with her husband. The pair commenced trading with Indians, occupying a small shanty on Store street. They made a large sum of money in a short time, and thirteen years ago her husband procured a divorce, divided the estate, and returned to Germany where he married again. The old woman continued the business at the old stand, in Victoria, for some years. Marvelous stories were told of her great wealth, which she was said to have buried beneath her bed. One dark night in the winter of 1864 two robbers planned a raid on the old woman's treasure. They had forced the outer door and were approaching her room when a watchman, attracted by the noise, seized them. The ruffians sprang upon and beat him on the head with their pistols. The sound of the affray was heard by Policeman Curry—a fine young Irishman of 22 years. As he entered the premises the robbers rushed past him, and the watchman, his eyes blinded with the blood that flowed from twenty wounds on his head, fired his revolver after them, and shot poor Curry through the heart. Mrs. Copperman saved her treasure and Curry lost his life.

It is different from anything heretofore seen in that locality.

The Echo says: "A thirty-two pound cannon ball was dug out the depths of Seattle dirt last week. How it came there is a query that no one can answer. It is supposed, however, to have been dropped from the Decatur, during the bombardment of the Indians there twenty years ago. A very ignorant—though progressive man has ventured to express his opinion that it grew from a musket ball which was shot there during the war against the Indians, in I. I. Stevens' time. Gardens will be good in Seattle this year, as the search for cannon balls has fairly begun.

GOOD BUFF.

A "FUNNY FELLOW'S" REPORT OF SENATOR MITCHELL'S SPEECH.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—The regular [illegible] of the Senate was edified to-day by an outbreak from Hipple-Mitchell against the Chinese, and something like a spat between the curly Conkling and the dry-as-dust Edmunds. Hipple-Mitchell broke gently into the character of a moralist and Christian statesman. He denounced any further toleration of Chinese emigration into this favored land. He roared so loudly and threshed the air so vigorously that all the Senate woke up and looked surprised. Logan, believing his occupation gone as a wind instrument, leaned pensively on the cloakroom door and scowled jealously at his rival bellows. Mitchell objected to the Chinese not because they are of an alien race, but because they are grossly immoral and tend to lower the tone of Occidental civilization, of which he (Mitchell) is guardian and custodian. Violence, [illegible] and loudness of speech were so unusual in the Senate that crowds from the neighboring halls poured in wonderingly, but left very soon when Mitchell's gate had been taken. He declared that the only business of the Chinese was [illegible], and as they never become naturalized they have no rights in this country. He was aided and abetted in this moral argument by Sargent, who, also in the character of a Christian statesman, [illegible] to the sinful ways of the Chinese.—S. F. Post.

[illegible] POST-MORTEM.

BALTIMORE, May 14.—A singular case has been developed at the Maryland University hospital. A young woman of intelligence and respectably connected, who has been treated for an incurable abdominal affection, requests that after death her body be dissected for the benefit of science. In a letter to resident physician Ashby, she says: "As my death must speedily result from causes which have baffled science and confused the best medical minds, I desire that you shall make upon my body, after death, an examination, and ascertain what it is that has afflicted my life. I request that such examination shall be made privately and [illegible] by yourself and a few of your [illegible] and medical friends. I have [illegible] urged my parents and friends to allow such an examination, and to inform you [illegible] as to my death in case of such an event. I shall go to my home from the hospital to pass the remainder of my days. A post mortem examination can do me no possible harm, and it may benefit science, and through it some other unfortunate affected like myself. Moreover, I desire to express in this way the gratitude I feel to the many medical [illegible] who have labored for my relief. Lastly, it is a duty I owe my sex and my God." She will leave the hospital and return to her home in the city, and in the event of her death her request will be complied with by the physicians named in her will.

THE USE OF TOBACCO.—Dr. B. F. Richardson, F. R. S., in his Diseases of Modern Life, is an uncompromising opponent to the use of tobacco. He refutes, however, the notion that tobacco smoking causes cancer and consumption. Dr. Richardson believes that there is no ground for assuming that organic disease results from the use of tobacco, but he believes that functional disorders are inseparable from the habit of smoking, and the author gives a long description of the various disorders which he believes may be traced to tobacco. The Lancet, in criticising Dr. Richardson's work, thinks that his statements are probably in the main accurate as regards the smoking when excessive, but that they are too sweeping when applied to all smoking, moderate and slight, as well as extreme." Somewhere, however, in the book, Dr. Richardson reluctantly admits that "under certain circumstances, tobacco does help to bring unnatural into natural functions, producing in the overwearied brain mental rest, partial oblivion of the past, and a tendency to that natural sleep which knits up the raveled sleeve of care."

PHENOMENA AT SEA.—The British iron ship Idomene, at New York, May 4th, from Calcutta, has an interesting log, reporting very heavy weather and a tempestuous voyage. On March 26th the trouble began with storms and heavy rain, thunder and lightning. The electric display was blinding in its brilliancy. It seemed as though the flashes were a minute in duration and their light continuous. Upon the mastheads and the yardarms played electric lights, like balls of fire, dancing from point to point, flickering over all the rigging. The vessel seemed to be swung on a pivot, one minute her jibboom would be clear under water, and the next her stern would be submerged. One-half of the time she was standing nearly straight up, with one end pointing at the sky, and the other half equally as near straight, with the other end up. There were several whirlwinds and waterspouts, some of the latter in threatening proximity to the vessel. One great waterspout burst, it was estimated five miles away, yet the hot vapor it discharged swept over the ship's deck like steam from a boiler, momentarily obscuring the sky.

FRIDAY MORNING MAY 26, 1876

ABOUT "INTRINSIC VALUE"

In the the course of current discussion of the money problem, there is no one point more strongly urged against the [illegible] theory than that which demands that the substance of which money is coined shall be something possessing an intrinsic value As gold and silver answer this requirement, they are well well adapted to use as money This theory, rightly understood is undoubtedly correct. But it is far from correct if the intrinsic value demanded is a value that is altogether independent of the arbitrary and conventional value of the substance it p[illegible] on account of its use as money Iron is intrinsically more valuable for the ordinary purposes of practical life—leaving out of consideration the purpose of a circulating medium—than gold or silver These make handsome wares for the rich, and are prized for jewelry, but they are not fit for plows reapers and railways and [illegible] shoes. The intrinsic value of any [illegible] is to be measured by its adaptability to [illegible] wants of mankind in sustaining [illegible] or in the carrying on of productive in[illegible] For these purposes gold and [illegible] are among the least valuable of [illegible] The gold twenty-dollar piece does not derive its value from the fact that [illegible] is in demand for the manu[illegible] of plate and jewelry, but the value [illegible] plate and jewelry is, to a very [illegible] due to the fact that they can [illegible] up and made into twenty-dollar [illegible]

[illegible] then is the intrinsic value of gold [illegible] which makes them better for [illegible] than paper? It is the fact that [illegible] conventional value is universal It [illegible] to one country American [illegible] is "worth its weight in gold" [illegible] the universally accepted sub[illegible] which arbitrary values are [illegible] by governments. It is intrinsi[illegible] because it is indestructible, [illegible] be changed from the money of [illegible] into the money of any other [illegible] the talk about intrinsic value that goes [illegible] this comes of the disposition [illegible] persons have to talk about [illegible] they have not previously thought [illegible] The paper on which a thousand [illegible] is printed is worth no [illegible] that on which a one dollar [illegible] printed; and neither of them is [illegible] the fiftieth part of a cent The [illegible] is imparted by the stamp upon [illegible] But the dyes and pigments with [illegible] that value is impressed on them [illegible] the paper less valuable for all [illegible] except the one purpose of giving [illegible] arbitrary value And yet the paper [illegible] is worth 88 to 90 per cent of the [illegible] That is, a single government, [illegible] that a worthless piece of [illegible] $1,000, makes it worth $880 [illegible] the money all the nations use [illegible] is wholly arbitrary, and yet the important thing it wants to make it [illegible] the only intrinsic value that gold [illegible] universal acceptance by the [illegible] world, If the American [illegible] adopted as the money of [illegible] nations, it would have the [illegible] intrinsic value that gold has [illegible] of transportation and of [illegible] and mutilated bills with [illegible] its counterbalance the in[illegible] of gold, if, indeed, it did [illegible] paper a decided preference [illegible] of the intrinsic value [illegible] anything more is meant by [illegible] universal accept[illegible] fully shown in the [illegible] of silver, which [illegible] period so puz[illegible] Silver is worth just as [illegible] and forks and firemen's [illegible] communion-service sets, as [illegible] Its intrinsic value, as [illegible] and general use has [illegible] A silver pitcher is just as [illegible] just as much more durable [illegible] as it ever was What [illegible] with silver? It is par[illegible] The great commer[illegible] of Europe have discredited it [illegible] its arbitrary and con[illegible] has been taken away, and [illegible] material for watch-cases and [illegible] save it from going the way [illegible] and of all other devices [illegible] which lack the quality of uni[illegible]

[illegible] we hear the reader say [illegible] are common-place and the [illegible] every one admits We [illegible] to read the discussions [illegible] by some in the East who [illegible] the masters of financial philos[illegible] they will excuse the presenta[illegible] in an Oregon paper

STAND BY THE COLORS

[illegible] is making a clean sweep of the [illegible] enthusiasm with which the [illegible] of the Alleghanies, and even [illegible] of the Mississippi, pronounce for him [illegible] to settle all fear that his locality [illegible] injuriously affect his chances of [illegible]. He is the choice of the Western [illegible] as the man for the occasion It is not at all improbable that Bristow [illegible] be quite as well received as he if [illegible] prominently forward by the [illegible], but Blaine is regarded as the one man who can certainly carry the national convention against the Washington ring and that is a paramount consideration with a great majority of those Republicans who realise the situation Blaine is honest and capable, and he is the strongest [illegible] to enter the lists against the scheme of perpetuating Grantism through the election of Conkling or Morton The ranks should not break now The contest is at hand, and they who think the Washington ring, with all the Federal patronage at command, will not be able to make a formidable showing in the convention, have not closely calculated the political forces that will operate in the struggle If the country knew the choice would fall upon Bristow, there could be no popular dissatisfaction at the action of any delegation who should vote for him instead of Blaine as the people generally have as great confidence in the Kentucky statesman as in the man they have designated as their first choice But a right to break ranks for the nomination of Bristow implies the right to break ranks for the nomination of any other man not named by the State conventions, and opens the door for the ring politicians to enter with their corrupting influence and their deceptive schemes and foist a ring candidate upon the party The only safety is in standing fast in Blaine

The Democratic State Convention of California have in our judgment acted discreetly in deferring the nomination of Presidential electors till after the St Louis convention The selection of Presidential electors before the nomination for President has been made is illogical and out of the natural order of things unless the electors are to be regarded as electors in fact and not merely agents of the party that selects them to do a particular business Under the system of party conventions as at present conducted the elector is not and can not be an elector in the constitutional sense and the natural time for a party to designate the men who are to cast the vote for the candidate is after it has been ascertained for whom the vote is to be cast

The opening, the reply and the rejoinder are already in That naturally concludes the discussion We have then decided to discontinue the publication of the poetry of the Emerald Isle

There were but three votes in the Minnesota Republican State Convention against the resolution declaring in very strong terms for Blaine for President

BLAINE OR BRISTOW?

To the Editor of the Oregonian

There is no other question now before the Republican party for its consideration so important as that involving our nomination for President I have read with interest your views in relation to this matter Agreeing with you as I do, that Mr Blaine is honest and capable and if nominated and elected would prove to be a safe and satisfactory President, I doubt whether he would be so available a candidate as Mr Bristow, who is also honest and capable, and who, I think at this time enjoys in a greater degree the confidence of the people Three or four months since I thought differently but, while Blaine has lost nothing in strength, Bristow has gained much more rapidly in popular favor If it be admitted that Bristow is the stronger in the affections of the country then it seems to me there should be no question as to his being the more available candidate You state that the politicians are opposed to Bristow which is no doubt true in a general sense but let either Blaine or Bristow be nominated and such opposition will be no more heard the politicians will at once go vigorously to work to secure his election while if the people should be disappointed in their hopes and desires the labor of arousing them to action may be found irksome and difficult In all probability the candidate who receives the electoral vote of New York will be our next President. Can we feel so certain of carrying that great State for Blaine or any other probable candidate as for Bristow? Evidently the New York Times and Harper's Weekly are of opinion that we cannot, and their opinions are certainly entitled to great weight in making up our decision I fear that with a great many very good Republicans there is more or less lack of confidence in Blaine while there is no such lack of confidence in Bristow The supporters of Blaine profess no doubt of our ability to elect Bristow if he be nominated while many of Bristow's supporters, notably the two papers mentioned and the Chicago Tribune and Cincinnati Gazette, four of the greatest Republican papers in the country, do express a sincere doubt of our ability to elect Blaine. Then why take unnecessary chances?

The resolution of our State Convention in favor of Blaine, should have weight with our delegates only as indicating the preference of the Republicans of Oregon or of a majority of them, but they should not forget that the vote of this State is not likely to determine the result, and even if the election should depend on the vote of Oregon, it is not probable that Blaine would to day receive a larger vote here than Bristow Mr Editor, the times are peculiar—a mistake may prove fatal

Yours truly, W

The first vote ever cast in Cincinnati by an American citizen of Chinese birth was polled at the municipal election, lately by a Chinaman named Joseph Sing. He voted the Democratic ticket

SPEECH OF RICHARD WILLIAMS

DELIVERED AT THE REPUBLICAN MEETING AT TURN HALLE, WEDNESDAY, MAY 24 1876

Mr President and Fellow Citizens It is not my purpose to night to attempt to make much of a political speech I would greatly prefer were it left to my choice and in consonance with the occasion which has brought us together to speak to the people of Portland and Oregon who are here concerning matters which bear more directly upon our material interests the tendency of which might be in some measure to aid in the developing of the agricultural and mineral resources of the country to build up our commercial and railroad interests and to procure for us our much needed river and harbor improvements for concerning these things I have some knowledge, and feel much interest rather than to speak exclusively upon matters which are connected with and grow out of the political condition of the country We have been called together to rejoice in view of the political situation in view of the advantageous ground we occupy in the coming conflict and the acceptable manner in which our conventions have discharged their duty to the people in the selection of worthy and competent men for the various offices Their character and qualifications are such as commend them to the public for the positions they have been elected to fill They are men in whose hands the public interest can safely be entrusted, and they ought to be elected The time for the election has been fixed by law and is near at hand Already the candidates of the various parties are in the field and the people awake to their interests And what we desire and ought to do is to present to the voter good and sufficient reasons that should control an intelligent judgment upon the day of the election This we must do if we hope for success

This is the purpose of the present assembling and in what I say here to night I purpose to speak only for myself and not for other gentlemen who are candidates upon district and county tickets Nor am I here as a candidate myself but as a citizen only to add my voice to the general rejoicing Yet I would not be expected nor would it be in accordance with my political professions and belief to say anything that would be in any sense anti Republican I say and believe we have occasion to rejoice, first, upon the vantage ground we occupy, and second upon the excellence of the nominees upon the ticket These two things in my judgment give us great advantage

The Republican party does not boast of the long existence which furnishes all Democratic orators with a source of argument It may not have enrolled among its membership so many great names as the Democratic party has it may not have stood by the people and the country on as many great occasions as the Democratic party has, or boast of so many triumphs but certainly no more patriotic and honorable men ever graced any party than have trained within its ranks, and no greater triumphs in the interest of the people and country have ever been achieved by any party or political organization than impartial history must record in favor of the Republican party during its existence within this republic

The Republican party was brought into existence and power by that condition of the country known as the irrepressible conflict and from the time of its birth to the present there has been in the government a kindred condition of things, equal in importance which has kept it in power And that condition has not yet ended The mission of the party is not yet performed the fruits of its great achievements are not yet made entirely secure to the people, and until this is accomplished the voice which called it into existence and to power and the work necessary for it to do in order to secure these results will continue it in power That the people seem newly awakened to this fact furnishes my hope for the future And if in the selection of our next candidate for the Presidency a man be chosen answering every hope of reformation, conscious of the fact that the good work is not yet done, and equal to the demands of the hour success must inevitably attend our efforts

Among the achievements of the party may be reckoned the preservation of the Union the existence intact of this government to day the making of all citizens equal before the law All citizens, of whatever race or nationality, stand before the law of this great republic free and equal without distinction of color or condition This I regard as one of the greatest triumphs of any party in this or any other age considering the condition of things that existed up to the time the Republican party took control of the government.

While we come here as Republicans and advocate the election of our candidates as Republicans we do not propose to advocate their election simply because they are Republicans simply because the ticket is headed Republican nor because we can reckon among the membership of the party honorable men nor in consequence of the past usefulness of the party Nor should they be defeated because heretofore dishonest men have been in places of power within the party But we come before the people to advocate the election of these men for the reasons, in addition to those already given that we have certain fixed and declared principles upon which we believe the government should be administered which are solely in the interest of the governed which we wish to enforce and have no other way to do it

The day when you can say to a man 'you are a Democrat' the day when you can say to a man 'you are a Republican and you have a ticket nominated by the party, you must vote it you must not question the acts of the convention, no matter whether it was packed or not' has gone by and I hope forever A cause which was among Republicans not long since potent to induce them to vote without question the ticket presented I mean actual national safety, has ceased in a measure, because of a better condition of things, has ceased to have that effect and I hope ere long because of a renewed patriotism in all thoughts of danger of this character will have a lodging place in the mind of none This is already so far the case that to day, if you would succeed, you must come with a cause that is worthy and that commands the respect of an intelligent judgment [Applause]

I do not believe that a candidate for office is responsible for the official delinquencies of his partisans nor do I believe that the party is responsible for the conduct of parties in office who, in official misconduct have violated every pledge made to the party unless after the act, the party in some way ratifies or approves the misconduct I believe in erecting a standard of personal intelligence and excellence that should be found in every candidate before his election to office, and then a wholesome responsibility to the people and the law for every neglect of duty and for all misconduct in office In the conventions of the party are declared the principles which they believe should be carried into effect in the administration of the government These are the pledges of the party to the people and every candidate is in honor bound to carry them into effect, and for a violation of this pledge he is responsible to the party for a violation of official duty he is responsible to the law When a candidate is elected he is no longer a partisan or ought not to be He is then an officer of the Government and represents his political friends or opponents alike And when the interests of any are to be considered by him he should rise above all partisan consideration This in my judgment is correct political doctrine and for this among other reasons I have always opposed [illegible] in connection with the discharge of official duty I have always opposed any kind of political gagging that shall control or influence official action [Applause] I have always said and I say now [illegible] as well [illegible] one branch of [illegible] as another [illegible] carry it into the courts as into the halls of the legislature Nothing but honesty of purpose [illegible]

ceed upon his party record [illegible] knows but little the pulse that [illegible] heart of this great people to d[illegible] Matters of national concern and matters of State concern are matters proper for discussion here —are questions that [illegible] the mind of every man [illegible] community One man has scarcely any advantage over another in these days of education newspapers and telegraphs in the means of acquiring information upon these subjects Everything that is of importance concerning national politics as well as all questions concerning our own and other States is carried into every household and within the reach of every person The national issues that are to be in the coming campaign and are to day maturing in the conventions of the people are How can we make this government better for the people? How can we remedy existing evils to revive our languishing national industries and advance the individual interest of every member of the community provide means to defray the necessary expenses of carrying on the government and for paying our national indebtedness and can all our duty be honestly discharged and our interests be safely trusted in the hands of our public men The great evil the present one which is talked of before all others is corruption in office in the various departments of government It is not the first time in our history that this has occurred and such conduct been the subject of investigation and [illegible] steps should be taken effectually to remedy it and prevent its recurrence if possible

In 18[illegible] I think it was Andrew Jackson a great Democratic President, instituted a new practice or rather changed the practice of his predecessors, in the matter of removing from office on account of the political opinion of the incumbent Previous to that time no President had ever changed the appointees of the Executive of the government because of political opinion Jackson in his inaugural address indicated his intention to do so and he did not only remove officials appointed by his predecessors to the heads of departments but he extended his removals to every post master in the land He did not stop with this he gave in effect a portion of this patronage to the members of Congress thus connecting them directly with this bad practice He said by this to all these subordinate officials then I think numbering about 9 000 since increased many thousands We will no longer tolerate in any one of you free speech or free action but you shall act in the interest of the party which appointed you to office This offered great inducements to members of Congress to get their friends appointed to office and to make liberal appropriation to be expended by them It also made every official who held his office by this uncertain tenure a party instrument. This practice has been since kept up This is one of the things that should be reformed No man should be removed from office during his term except for misconduct To this practice many of the present evils may be traced

The Democracy are now making a great deal of noise about this official misconduct You remember some time since the Republicans enacted a law intended to reform the civil service and have attempted to carry this law into effect but have so far been unable wholly to purify the service So far, no member of Congress belonging to the Democracy has been heard to rise in his place and suggest an amendment to this law to make it more effectual in accomplishing the work for which it was intended A tenure of office act was passed in Johnson's time intended to remedy and it did remedy many of the evils existing in the civil service Both were great strides in the right direction and much more progress might have been made in the present Congress but for the opposition of the Democratic members This opposition was perhaps more signally manifested in their opposition to the bill to prevent under severe penalties, the contribution of funds for election purposes by employes and officers of the government The bill as reported by Mr Caulfield, did not include the members of Congress Mr Blaine offered an amendment bringing them within its operation The bill was a step in the right direction as it was, but it was obviously right to include all the officers of the government and an honest spirit of reform must so concede Every intelligent voter within this hall knows that more of such corruption is charged to members of Congress than to all other officers put together The Democrats defeated that bill as amended, and passed the bill without the amendment If the practice is wrong —and it certainly is—it is wrong in Democrats and Republicans alike and the partisan spirit which legislates against all branches of the government except the one under the control of that particular party is pernicious [Applause.]

At the time I was nominated here on this floor, I made a statement in reference to the investigations being carried on at Washington I said then as I say now, that I hoped they would pursue these investigations, and if a guilty man be found either there or within the remotest confines of our territory, bring him to justice, but, I said, let the investigations be made in the interest of the people and of honest reformation, and not in the interest of any party. I have been informed that Gov Grover said at the Democratic meeting at Oro Fino Hall that I was opposed to these investigations Let me tell you now, and tell it so that His Excellency and his friends may understand it, that I am in favor of those investigations, that I am in favor of them for the purpose of bringing all perpetrators of crime to justice, and for the purpose of remedying the evil, and not for the purpose of political advantage I would not only press those investigations, but I would know by similar means what if any official corruption exists and is being carried on in our own State I would know concerning the alleged frauds in the State prison management. I would know concerning the alleged mismanagement of the school fund I would know why State officials are receiving exorbitant salaries over and above the constitutional limitation I would know the truth concerning the sales of the public lands belonging to the State, school university and swamp I would know how an indebtedness exceeding a half million dollars is fastened upon the State when the constitution provides that the indebtedness of the State shall not exceed $50 000 I would know concerning the extravagance in the public printing All these are matters in which the people are interested And when a Democratic House of Representatives at Washington inquire of President Grant concerning his absence from the capital and his employment while absent it is pertinent to ask if no such inquiry need be made by the House of Representatives at Salem concerning the conduct of our governor in these respects I am in favor of investigating these things, gentlemen and I believe it ill becomes any man while he exercises the highest office in the gift of the people of this State—a public servant and paid at public expense—daily to prostitute that high office to advance his own interests towards the United States Senate [Prolonged applause.] I would make no investigation into official conduct for the purpose of destroying the character of a worthy public servant I would make none in the interest of a party Let none be made only for the public good I have said more now than I intended to say on this point and all I ask of my political opponents is a fair and honest representation of what I do say

One great reason why I urge the election of our legislative ticket is that these matters I have mentioned of so great public interest and in which the people believe they have been cheated may be thoroughly and impartially investigated and you know, as well as I do that if our opponents are elected no such investigations will be made and many opportunities may be offered and seized to cover up misconduct if any exists I hope it is not irreverent in me to say these investigations should be made and I press upon you gentlemen to elect these capable and intelligent men whom you know to be pledged to all honest reformation I ask it further because you will by that means send a man to the United States Senate who will there labor to purify every department of this government where corruption is found to exist without exposing the nation to a renewal of troubles from which we have now nearly emerged

You remember a Republican Congress passed a law fixing a time when when we shall resume specie payment Without waiting for that time to arrive and without an effort [illegible] into effect we find the Democracy [illegible] laboring to repeal the law I am in favor of [illegible] and of the payment of the national debt according to the terms of its contract, and I am in favor [illegible] the Republican party [illegible] payment at the earliest [illegible] all [illegible] and throw [illegible] [Applause] Gentlemen I will not now take your time [illegible] There are other gentlemen here [illegible] who will deal with the [illegible] much more [illegible] than I [illegible] I thank you for your attention

Was called for and responded in his usual stirring and humorous vein prefacing his speech with thanks to Mr Goodell who had kindly consented to give way. He intended, he said to confine himself to Oregon and the interests which she has in the political questions which now agitate the American people politically Many things exist which if taken in time may be controlled, and work out the weal of a great people, but which, if allowed to grow, would soon get beyond the power of legislation or of law Matters which were regarded as very small in their incipiency, and then could be easily managed, if not looked after at the proper time grew out of the reach of the people and affected them for all time This was illustrated by the story of De Lesseps and the son of the Khedive the former befriending the latter in his boyhood secured the opening of the Suez Canal when the son succeeded to the kingdom of Egypt. The application of this was made in treating of the railroad interests of our State which are likely to be [illegible] by the great corporation owning the overland railway We should stand firmly against this big [illegible] and by the interests of the German owners of our Oregon road and secure connection with the East See that the rights of the parties now owning the Oregon road should be protected and they not be driven out by the great corporate power which would gobble up everything in the State and render it tributary to their grand monopoly Coming down more specially to political topics the speaker said the Republican party had a history Its organization saved the nation and with it the blessings of civil and religious liberty to us and mankind It had achieved great enterprises built a transcontinental railway and passed the homestead law The tariff system of the party which Democrats charged was one of protection to individuals and tended to foster monopolies was the true theory of the protection discriminating in favor of home industries Remove the tariff for instance from wool and Brazil which could place hundreds of millions of pounds in our markets at seven cents per pound would make it impossible to get pay for raising a single sheep in the whole of the United States The great clamor about finances reminded us of Lincoln's story of the goose which in war times ate up the gold and laid greenbacks the Republicans proposed in time of peace, the goose should be turned round, but the Democrats objected The Republican party effected a great political reform when it changed the old order of allowing official delinquents to slip quietly out and cover up their delinquency for fear of injuring the party Some scheming politicians had objected to this step by Republicans and predicted disaster to the party if rascals in it were prosecuted, but the step was taken and though the prognostications of the politicians who were not statesmen had in a measure proved true, and the Democracy had achieved a partial triumph, the triumph of the Republicans in advancing beyond the old doctrine that rascality must be covered up to save the party was still greater Reviewing the attitude of Democracy as a national party the speaker showed its unwillingness to grapple with the questions in regard to which it made such great pretensions of reform Though willing to expend thousands to investigate the delinquencies of some official where a few hundred dollars were involved, by reason of a collusion with the despotic caucus of thirteen chosen by the Democrats to dictate the measures and policy of that party in Congress, the overland railroad companies were allowed to defraud the people of sixteen millions of dollars every year without a single remonstrance from the Democratic members of Congress who secured their election by such loud protestations of reform The selection of the caucus of thirteen was one of the first steps of the Democrats after reaching the halls of Congress and this caucus was one of the worst of despotisms No member could offer or advocate any measure against its will, and to entrust the government to the Democratic party would be to turn it over to this worse than iron despotism. Mr Applegate's speech which occupied about an hour in its delivery, was listened to with great interest, and he was frequently and loudly cheered After a patriotic air by the band the audience dispersed in excellent humor and with a good degree of enthusiasm

Weights and Measures.

The different systems of weights and measures [illegible] in this country and in Europe cause some dif[illegible] with those whose transactions do not re[illegible] to make the calculations frequently The April [illegible] of the Agricultural Bureau makes the following note on the subject which will be [illegible] as reference

Our American bushel is the same as that which in England is known as the Winchester bushel An [illegible] English bushel is equal to 1 03152 Winchester bushels, a difference of about 3 per cent In the London markets grain is quoted by the quarter equal to 8 Imperial or to 8 25⅛ Winchester bushels In [illegible] grain is marketed by weight instead of bulk, using the cental of 100 pounds Flour for [illegible] is bought and sold in England in par[illegible] of 280 pounds. In London maize is quoted in [illegible] in Liverpool in parcels of 480 pounds [illegible] flour is the only flour marketed in ba[illegible] of 196 pounds each, California barrels contain [illegible] or two centals each Sometimes flour [illegible] into the United Kingdom is designated by hundred weights (cwts) each of which is one twentieth of the long ton of 2 240 pounds In California the short ton equal to 20 centals, 2 000 pounds, is universally used East of the Rocky Mountains both the long and the short ton are used but for different [illegible] ements.
